TENURE-TRACK ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF GEOLOGY

The School of Earth and Ocean Sciences at the University of Victoria invites applications for a Tenure Track Assistant Professor position in Geology to commence as early as July 2016. The School emphasizes an Earth Systems Science approach, and the ideal candidate will be able to interact broadly with faculty who specialize in solid-earth, earth-surface, ocean and atmosphere processes. We seek candidates in tectonics, sedimentology or geochemistry with a research focus that examines the processes and evolution of the Earth System using the geologic record. The successful candidate will develop a vigorous, independent, externally-funded research program that complements existing strengths in the School. It is also expected that the candidate will supervise graduate students and teach undergraduate and graduate courses, in particular, geological field schools and other core geology courses, and actively contribute to departmental initiatives. A PhD is required at the time of appointment and post-doctoral and field-work experience is desirable. A strong and/or actively growing research record and excellent teaching potential are expected.

Applications, in a single pdf file, should include a letter of application, a detailed curriculum vitae, contact information (name, address, email) for three references, a two-page statement describing the applicant's teaching experience and philosophy, and a two-page statement describing their current and future research interests/direction. Applications or requests for further information should be sent electronically to Dr. Stan Dosso, Acting Director, School of Earth and Ocean Sciences at seos@uvic.ca. Review of applications will begin on January 15, 2016, and will continue until a suitable candidate is identified. Information about the School of Earth and Ocean Sciences can be found at <http://www.uvic.ca/science/seos/>.

Faculty and Librarians at the University of Victoria are governed by the provisions of the Collective Agreement.
